By NER MINDLIN

WITH every day bringing us a different twist to the present crisis, this might not seem the time to try to make a long-term assessment of the situation. As a matter of fact, I have heard cynics remark here that we not only do not, but cannot have a long-term policy, because it is always outside factors that are decisive for us. It is true that the intermediate times in this cold war tend to have their larger issues determined by big-power moves and calculations, but on the other hand, events in rather small countries can sometimes be magnified out of all proportion on the East-West screen. These intermediate areas — the Middle East, South-East Asia, Indonesia — are the danger zones, the focus of East-West rivalry, centers of societal working slowly and most uneasily towards some form of stability, using and being used by the nationalistic which substitutes for decaying or moribund religions and institutions.

MEANWHILE, it is much to be regretted that the West has no forceful, dynamic propaganda policy for these areas, leaving them prey to the blarney and blandishments of Moscow. Everybody knows about Little Rock, American unemployment, etc., but who knows about Soviet treatment of non-Russian nationalities in the U.S.S.R., of the Moslems, for example (since only we are interested in what happens to the Jews), of widespread unemployment among Soviet youth, and innumerable other negative aspects of the regime that would be comprehensible to underdeveloped nationalities. This may not have been the way of the West, but there is apparently no alternative to joining the shouting match. But this is a long-term consideration that must be adequately prepared and planned to have any effect.

ONE of the lessons we hope may be learned by the West from the present crisis is the nature of Arab Nationalism, and the extent to which Israel is a secondary, or even tertiary factor in the present and general upheaval in the Arab world — if Israel didn't exist, something similar would have been invented. The question of how to deal with Arab Nationalism remains wide open. The present measures can only be temporary ones, and sooner or later, probably sooner, something more will be required. Meanwhile, the present Iraqi palace revolutionaries have been showing signs of being sweet and reasonable and wanting an accommodation with the West. It is entirely possible that with its immediate fears of a Soviet foothold in Iraq and the stoppage of the oil-flow from the West, they may want to come to terms with the new regime, and perhaps with the Arab world in general.

It is then that our position will become most difficult and most dangerous. It is quite possible that we shall be asked to make concessions and waive rights to be "reasonable." We shall need all our firmness and self-confidence, all our stubbornness and single-mindedness. We are neither the West nor the fire, and the only putting we have to do is to pull together. Cypriot Turks Ask Troops from Turkey

NICOSIA (Reuters). — The Turkish leader in Cyprus, Dr. Kutchuk, cabled Mr. Macmillan and Mr. Dulles in London on Sunday asking for Turkish troops to be despatched immediately to Cyprus to guard Turkish lives and "ensure the security of island bases against Communist infiltration."

Copies of the cable were sent to the Turkish Prime Minister, the Nato Council and the U.N.

Dr. Kutchuk complained that Greeks in the island continued to massacre Turks in spite of the extraordinary measures taken by the Government.

The Greek organization, EOKA, had again declared it would not cease its campaign of violence until it had achieved its aim of union with Greece — a policy to which the Turks would never submit, he said.

The cable said events had proved it was impossible for Turks and Greeks to live together under the rule and urged that the island be partitioned before it is too late.

Foot's Appeal
The Governor of Cyprus, Sir Hugh Foot, has issued another appeal to island leaders to use their influence to end violence, warning that "as long as violence continues, there is no hope for the future."

He made the appeal in a telegram to Dr. Themistocles Dervis, Mayor of Nicosia, in reply to a message in which the Mayor protested against mass arrests of Cypriot Greeks.

The Governor said Dr. Dervis had "entirely misunderstood the purpose of the arrests."

"As you know, at the same time I ordered the proscription of T.M.T. (the Turkish underground movement) and arrests of Turkish Cypriots known or believed to be planning further violence," the Governor said.

Repeating his statement that information had been received about an E.O.K.A. (Greek terrorist organization) intention to launch large-scale attacks on Turks, the Governor said:

"I took these measures, with the greatest reluctance, to fulfil my primary responsibility for saving life and preventing civil war... When violence has been removed we can get on with practical progress. But as long as violence continues there is no hope for the future."

1,000 Peronistas Clash with Police

BUENOS AIRES. — Police clashed on Saturday night with 1,000 supporters of the deposed President Juan Peron, who were demonstrating in defiance of a police ban, on the anniversary of the death of Peron's wife, Eva. The crowds were dispersed with tear gas.

WJC Calls on World Jewry To Rally to the Support of Israel

GENEVA (DNA). — Ninety World Jewish Congress leaders, meeting here in executive session, on Sunday lauded Israel's achievements in its first decade and adopted resolutions calling to rally to the aid of the Jewish State; to increase immigration to Israel, and to render her all possible economic and political help.

The main topics under discussion were Jewish survival amidst dispersion, Jewish education and the maintenance of the cultural unity of the Jewish people. The meeting heard reports on the condition of Jewish communities throughout the world.

Dr. A. Steinberg, of London, director of the W.J.C. Cultural Department, said that, although the future of the nearly three million Jews in the Soviet Union remained shrouded in mystery, whenever a Jewish eye succeeded in piercing the veil of secrecy it met with a picture of faithfulness to Jewish destiny.

The Chairman of the World Jewish Congress, Dr. Arie Tarkenton, warned that indifference by Israel, and especially by Jewish youth, to the affairs of the Jews of the rest of the world, may result in a very definite split between them to the detriment of all.

Israel's Leaders Blamed
He declared that responsibility for the present situation in regard to relations between Israel and the Diaspora rested, to a considerable degree, with the present spiritual leaders of Israel's Jewry who have not succeeded in building a bridge between Israel and the Diaspora and in many instances are far from really understanding the problems of Israel.

No details of the overall Israel plan have been disclosed, but it is known that the problem of major organizational concern is the relationship of the Diaspora to Israel, which many delegates have described as "bridging the gap between world and Israel Jewry."

It is known that the Israel delegation has been active in lobbying a blueprint for improving the organization of the Congress as a whole, and in relation with Israel, in particular.

Mysterious Bang Shakes Tel Aviv

TEL AVIV. — A mysterious, but resounding, explosion shook this city at 4.30 p.m. on Sunday. The explosion rattled windows in all parts of the city, but neither the police, the fire brigade, nor the Army spokesman could explain its cause.

Immediately after the explosion, a plane was heard flying over the city, coming in from the sea.

U.S. Marine Killed by Rebel Sniper in Beirut

BEIRUT (UPI). — A U.S. Marine was shot dead near the Beirut International Airport on Sunday. First reports indicated that he was shot by an insurgent sniper.

A Marine Corps spokesman said the man was hit in the head and killed instantly as he was walking alone near his company's positions south of the airport. He is the fourth American serviceman killed in Lebanon since the American landing two weeks ago.

The first victim was a Navy jet pilot whose plane was shot down and killed by a rebel sniper near Beirut. Another Marine was shot and killed by one of his own men when he failed to answer a sentry's challenge.

The spokesman added that an investigation into the Marine's death had been opened, but the circumstances in which he had been killed had not yet been determined.

The spokesman added that the Marine's death had been caused by a rebel sniper concealed in the hills overlooking the Beirut positions south of the airport.

Jordan-Syria Border Clash

AMMAN (Reuters). — A military spokesman announced Sunday that a Jordanian army patrol had clashed with infiltrators on the Syrian border near Kaf Koon, in the northern area, after an exchange of fire, arrested a group of eight persons, one of whom was injured.

The patrol confiscated firearms and a quantity of explosives.

British Say Israel's Position Must be Discussed at Parley

By GERARD L. COHEN, Jerusalem Post Correspondent
LONDON. — The importance of placing the question of Arab-Israeli relations on the agenda of a summit meeting is being increasingly emphasized by the local press and radio; Israeli leaders are being quoted as saying military action may be unavoidable should Jordan be swallowed up by the United Arab Republic.

This was confirmed by Mr. Yigal Allon, M.P., on a special B.B.C. Middle East link-up, televised to a peak audience on Saturday night.

The former Israeli army commander warned that if Jordan should eventually succumb to the U.A.R., Israel would seriously contemplate taking "security measures."

The loudest Tory advocates of British intervention in the Middle East are now admitting the strength of the anti-Hussein feeling in Jordan and the inability of either the British or the United States to force a regime for ever.

This realization has led to a new attitude of greater flexibility but as agreeing that the present is not the time to recognize a regime which only two weeks ago seized power, killing King Faisal and Prime Minister Nuri es-Said.

Under Nuri, Iraq was a founder member of the pact. Its new Republican Prime Minister, Abdul Karim Kassem, said on Saturday that no decision had been taken about withdrawing from the pact, but he wanted to be friendly with all nations.

Troops Asked to Stay
AMMAN (Reuters). — A Jordanian spokesman on Sunday night denied a report that the Government intends to ask British troops to stay here for five years.

The highest sources authorized to deny these lies completely, the spokesman said. He said Jordan had asked for British troops purely as an emergency measure, and foreign forces would leave the country as soon as the situation was stabilized.

The spokesman added that the British troops were not to be used for anything but the maintenance of law and order in the country.

Dulles Trying to Bridge Western Summit Rift

LONDON (UPI). — U.S. Secretary of State Dulles worked to repair the continued Western rift on a summit meeting Sunday and to help build a new defence line-up to keep Russia out of the Middle East. Informed sources said he and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan agreed that the Middle East summit meeting should be held in New York, regardless of French objections.

The sources said they also agreed to maintain the structure and name of the Baghdad Pact, despite the Iraq revolution.

Mr. Dulles met with Mr. Macmillan and Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd at 10 Downing Street at 10.00 G.M.T. and the talks were continued over lunch. Altogether it lasted nearly four hours.

Then Mr. Dulles rushed back to the U.S. Embassy to receive Jordan Ambassador Abdul Munim Rifai and called on Iranian Prime Minister Eghbal and Pakistani Prime Minister Khan Noon.

This evening he was meeting again with Messrs. Macmillan, Eghbal, Noon and Turkish Premier Adnan Menderes over a "working dinner" given by Mr. Lloyd at his official residence for participants in Monday's meeting of the Baghdad Pact Council.

The Secretary of State had arrived late Saturday night after conferring in Bonn with West German Chancellor Adenauer.

Informed sources here say Mr. Dulles and the British leader are leaving open the "ultimate composition" of the summit parley. The sources said they agreed this could be settled by the Security Council itself in agreement with Russia.

In sharp contrast to Washington's reported reluctance to hold a summit meeting, Mr. Dulles found Mr. Macmillan and Mr. Lloyd enthusiastic and anxious to get it underway not later than August 11.

Mr. Macmillan was virtually positive into acceptance of the "ultimate composition" of the parley. Since he took the initiative as first of the Western leaders to accept the Soviet bid for talks, the Prime Minister's stock has soared in this country. He is backed in this not only by the ruling Conservatives but also by the Labour and Liberal opposition.

The Macmillan Government was said to be disturbed by American reluctance — depicted in the British press as "hesitant" — Mr. Macmillan was said to be anxious to work out an agreed Western policy on the Middle East before the meeting with Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

On the Baghdad alliance, the U.S. and Britain were said to have agreed that the reasons for founding it in 1955 still exist and that it should be maintained, despite the probable defection of Iraq. Mr. Dulles was said to have brought no premise that the U.S. would now become a full member of the Pact. (U.S. News — P.2, Col. 5)

Peres Delays Trip For Consultations
LYDDA AIRPORT. — A few minutes before his plane was to take off for Rome on Sunday, Mr. Shimon Peres, Director-General of the Ministry of Defence, announced that he was postponing his trip indefinitely.

It is understood that Mr. Peres' trip was delayed by the need for further consultations.

"TALBIN" makes laundry white and stainless — stainless!

It is also pointed out that if any issues vital to Israel are discussed and the Arab States are invited, Israel would receive an invitation to attend without pressing for it. The question also arises, of course, whether top-level Arab leaders would sit in the same room with their Israeli counterparts to discuss specific Middle East affairs. This in itself could be considered de facto recognition of Israel's existence.

A newspaper report that Ambassador Abba Eban would consult with Secretary of State Dulles in London was denied by the Foreign Ministry on Sunday. Mr. Eban left Paris where he had met Mr. Dulles with Israeli diplomats for an exchange of views, he picked up his family in London, and returned with them to the U.S.

Regarding the meeting of Foreign Minister Meir and General de Gaulle, no new date has yet been fixed. When Mrs. Meir's physicians give their permission for her to travel, the date will first be set with the French Government, and then made public, it was said.

The Cabinet meeting which was put off one day because of Tisha B'Av will hear a report on Monday from the Prime Minister on the political situation.

France Says West Misunderstands M.E.
MADRID (Reuters). — General Franco, in the first official Spanish comment on the Middle East crisis, said Sunday that the policy of the West was going against the natural current of the Middle East nations, and the adversaries of the West knew how to take advantage of these conditions.

He said it was regrettable that, while the West endeavored to help the nations of the Middle East to liberty and independence, its actions appeared to be against the natural current of the Middle East nations, and the adversaries of the West knew how to take advantage of these conditions.

It is a paradoxical situation that, while Russia is the real menace threatening the independence of those nations, the lack of understanding of the West could push them towards danger.
